

Mary Poppins Singalong:

Some came just for the food

Some actually watched the movie and sang along

Wish my folks had taken me see Mary Poppins when I was that young!!

Lectures in room 7 are not always followed this attentively

Lots of fun costumes!

Even more fun costumes!

Brain's first time to see Mary Poppins, thanks to Hannah's vote. Votes for Women!!

Notice the very clean chimney, very well swept!

Those who enjoy the panoramas of London: stars, birds, and chimney sweeps!

The hard core militant suffragettes wore dark colors.

Smiling suffragette: ready to throw eggs at the Prime Minister?

Bert: Busker, Screever, Chimney-sweep, & now even Bible translator!

David: IT guru, and the first linguist to count the various vowels in "supercalifragilisticexpialidocious". The AL department is proud!

The spoon full of sugar
Was Bethany a pediatric nurse?

Mary Poppins may have said that she thought references were outdated, but as Applied Arts students write their papers, they should still use references.

Zoe qualifies:
Rosy cheeks, no warts! Play games, all sorts.

Well done sister suffragettes!

Joey, waiting for the wind to change.

David with a sweetheart's photo over his heart.

Better than a nanny who's merely nearly perfect in every way, he's got Mommy!

The third and final singalong appearance by Allison Bryant (GIAL MA 2008), though Mr & Mrs. Pyle may show up next spring.

A costume good for her posture, but hard to dance in.

Chalk art, live and in HD.

Morphological dilemma:
Marys Poppinses? Mary Poppinses?

He works in a cage in the, to be specific, Dawes, Tomes, Mously, Grubbs, Fidelity Fiduciary Bank.

Voting for best costumes, conducted by Ellen, the veteran conductress of the Clap-o-meter.

Unanimous first place

2nd place: Meaghan, the lamp from Mary Poppins' magic carpet bag.

So what more can we say? We'll just use the word you say when you don't know what else to say: supercalifragilisticexpialidocious!
